quality implementation looks like, WHY it's important, WHEN to engage in the PROCESS page for step-by-step guidance on how to engage in the real tools to support your efforts.

Plan?

Important roadmap for getting the word out about SEL, building enthusiasm about your plans and achievements with SEL implementation.

A strong communications plan:

Highlights the importance of SEL for all students and includes communication about rollout timelines and expectations for roles and responsibilities.

Includes consistent messaging about SEL tailored to key stakeholder groups in appropriate languages and formats.

Supports the superintendent and other district leaders in regularly communicating about the importance of SEL both formally and informally.

Use the Rubric to assess your communications plan.

In your communication plan, you'll answer four key questions:

- Who do you want to reach? (Your audience)
- What do you want to achieve? (The goal)
- What do you want to say? (The message)
- How will you send your message? (The medium)

Your answers to these questions will guide what kinds of messages you'll create, who you'll send them to, and how you'll deliver them.

Your communication plan can include many different kinds of messages targeting various audiences, including:

- Introductory presentations for key stakeholders (e.g. CASEL's interactive online course An Introduction to Social and Emotional Learning, SEL 101 presentation and video, A Case for SEL introductory presentation, Sacramento City's SEL presentation to the Board)
- Print material that can be provided at district events and at school sites (e.g., this 2-page summary explaining SEL, a Snapshot of SEL in Washoe County, Oakland's brochure "Social and Emotional Learning Benefits All Students and Adults", SEL in El Paso infographic)

- Promotional videos (e.g. Austin's "A District Embracing SEL", Chicago's "SEL at Marcus Garvey Elementary", SEL in Sacramento City)
- Public websites (e.g. Social and Emotional Learning in Oakland Unified School District, Atlanta Public Schools, Grand Rapids Public Schools, SEL Dallas)
- Press releases or interviews with local and education media (e.g. Washoe County's "Impact of SEL on Graduation Rates", Austin Superintendent discusses achievement gaps, social-emotional learning)
- Materials designed specifically for parents and students (e.g. Oakland's classroom posters and guide for introducing SEL to students; CASEL's SEL for Parents video, Austin's newsletter for parents and caregivers)
- Social media

This template can help you organize and plan foundational learning experiences about SEL for different audiences.

Why does my district need to develop a communication plan?

Clear, ongoing communication is a key strategy in the successful implementation of SEL. By getting the message out to key audiences (such as district leaders, funders, staff and teachers, students, families, and community members), you'll be able to:

- Help these stakeholders understand what SEL is.
- Increase awareness of the research and findings about the benefits of SEL.
- Promote SEL in classrooms and schools.
- Make the case for investing in SEL.

Sustained communication about your district's implementation of SEL can help you:

Influence district leaders to promote and support systemic adoption of SEL principles and practices.

Engage teachers and staff to rally behind SEL initiatives and strive to incorporate SEL practices schoolwide.

Build enthusiasm in district students and families, and encourage them to adopt SEL practices in the home and community.

Convince funders to dedicate financial support to SEL implementation.

Failure to communicate about SEL with key audiences can:

- Create confusion about SEL in our schools.
- Lead community members to question the value of this work.
- Lessen the commitment of educators, school leaders, and others.
- Reduce the chances for sustainable funding.

When should my district develop a communication plan?

Develop your communication plan early in the planning for SEL implementation to help produce support and buy-in from internal stakeholders such as staff, teachers, and out-of-school time providers. You'll also want to consider communicating with parents, family members, and the community about what SEL is and how they can support and benefit from SEL practices. We recommend developing your communication plan as part of your overall SEL action plan.

Once you've launched SEL in your district, you'll want to maintain communication with stakeholders throughout the school year and update your communication plan as needed.

Who should be involved in developing your communication plan?

Your SEL lead should work with the planning committee that creates the SEL plan to consider what needs to be included in the communication plan. You will probably also want to include the communication lead or staff for your district to lend their expertise to the communication plan.

When implementing your plan, there are a range of other communication professionals you may wish to engage to help craft your messaging. Often these roles will be taken by existing staff, although depending on your district's resources, you may wish to bring in additional staff or temporary assistance or outsource to a communication firm. Some useful roles to consider include:

- Website manager: to manage updates to the district website, work with vendors, monitor traffic, and look for strategies to increase traffic and usage.
- Media outreach leads: to pitch stories of interest to local media, guide staff in creating content for blogs and news sites, develop an organizational media outreach list, and create and distribute press releases.
- Social media manager: to create and manage content for social media (Twitter, Facebook, etc.), schedule the publication of content, monitor engagement, and provide responses when needed.
- Editorial lead: to lead content discussions, manage communications calendars and campaigns, and develop content as needed.
- Designer: to provide visual guidance and direction for messaging, and procure images as needed.

ant to reach.

Identifying all of your key stakeholder groups. Remember to include both those who have influence over your SEL work as well as those who are affected by it.

These may include:

- District administrators
- Students
- Teachers, counselors, and other school staff who work directly with students
- School principals
- Family members
- Early education and out-of-school time program providers
- Community organizations that work with students or schools
- Researchers
- School board members
- Local law enforcement
- Local businesses

Once you've identified your stakeholders, prioritize them according to two factors: their influence on the SEL implementation and their interest in SEL implementation.

2. Determine what you want to achieve with your communication

You need to establish clear goals so that your communication plan will be effective. When developing these goals, be sure to link them with the audiences you already outlined.

Here are some examples of goals that are linked with audiences:

- Austin Independent School District wants to reach out to existing and potential funders to help them understand the research findings underpinning the district's SEL initiative.

- Metro Nashville Public Schools wants to target families and students in order to build visibility and understanding of SEL work through specific success stories.
- Grand Rapids Public Schools Department of Social and Emotional Learning produces a monthly newsletter for all schools and administrators to spotlight schools and individual educators, share information and best practices, and build interest in and prioritization of SEL across the district.

3. Develop your message(s).

Once you've identified your goal and target audience, you need to develop your message. A method called message mapping can help you build effective and clear messaging.

With message mapping, you develop the following:

- Core statement: This is a single sentence that sums up what you want to communicate. Think of it as your "elevator pitch."
- Key messages: The key messages support your core statement by answering the question "What does that mean?" With your key messages, you explain how you will translate your vision into action. Typically you'll try to develop three key messages.
- Support points: For each key message you'll want to provide three support points. These are your "proof" that your message is true. Support points are often statistics, case studies, or stories from the field.

For more about message mapping as well as a message map worksheet, download Steps for Developing Effective Communication Strategies for Social Emotional Learning or this sample message map.

For an example, read about how Broward County Public Schools began by listening to stakeholders, and with their input created a variety of useful and accessible SEL communications resources.

4. Discuss methods for conveying your message(s).

There are a variety of ways to get your message out about SEL. To be most effective, you'll likely want to use a variety of media and communication channels.

Here are some examples of ways to reach your audiences:

- Create a presentation or flyer for professional learning, school-based meetings, or town halls to introduce stakeholders. Examples include:
 - CASEL's Introduction to Social and Emotional Learning online course
 - CASEL's SEL 101
 - Nashville's Introduction to SEL for School Staff
 - Snapshot of SEL in Washoe County
- Develop and distribute a brochure or newsletter to parents to educate them about SEL and how it will contribute to students' success. Here are some examples:
 - Oakland Unified School District's SEL benefits brochure
 - Austin Independent School District's parent newsletter
- Find or create a video about SEL that could either be shown at a meeting or professional learning session or posted on the district website. Examples include:

- CASEL's SEL for Parents (8:31 runtime); also available in Spanish (8:50 runtime)
- Edutopia: 5 Keys to Successful Social and Emotional Learning (6:02 runtime)
- CASEL's What is SEL? (3:22 runtime)
- Summarize research findings for those in a position to influence budgeting, hiring, or funding for SEL. Examples include:
 - An update on social and emotional learning outcome research (Mahoney, Durlak, & Weissberg, 2018)
 - Academic Learning + Social-Emotional learning = National Priority (Weissberg & Cascarino, 2013)
- Place articles in traditional news media, such as newspapers or on local news broadcasts. You can use existing publications, white papers, issue briefs, and case studies to create a base of resources on a topic area. Use these materials to create press releases to demonstrate to news outlets that your SEL initiative deserves coverage. Here are some examples:
 - Social-Emotional Learning in Schools Is So Much More Than 'Nicey-Nice.' It Can Be a Lifeline, Education Post
 - Chicago Public Schools Leads on SEL with a Collaborative Approach to Implementation, Education Dive
 - Austin ISD Superintendent Cruz Discusses Achievement Gaps, Social-Emotional Learning, Community Impact Newspaper
 - This Principal Has a Creative Way of Encouraging Positive Student Behavior, Education Week
 - Emotional Intelligence—A Student Success Factor, Univision
- Engage your audience through social media platforms such as Twitter and Facebook and online publishing media such as blogs. These platforms allow for “instant” communication and let you engage back-and-forth with your target audiences.

5. Bring together your target audiences, goals, and messages in your communication plan.

Your plan should include specific outreach activities and timelines. This sample communication plan can serve as a model. You can also download the Steps for Developing Effective Communication Strategies for Social Emotional Learning guide which contains a communications planning worksheet.

Ten years ago, CASEL began collaborating with school district SEL leaders to explore the question - Is it possible to implement SEL systemically to positively impact students across a large urban school district? Not only did districts demonstrate that it was possible, but every district has deepened and expanded SEL implementation since joining the collaborative. This anniversary report details 6 key insights from these districts about how they were able to sustain SEL over the long term, even as the people and contexts within the district changed.
